

Funeral Consumers

ALLIANCE

NATIONAL CONFERENCE 2008

WE'RE IN THIS TOGETHER
CONSUMER ADVOCACY FROM THE GRASSROOTS TO THE NATION

Seattle University
June 26 - 28, 2008
901 12th Ave.
Seattle, Washington

If you've never been to Funeral Consumers Alliance's national conference before, don't miss this one. We've got the largest program of speakers in our history, and we're honored to be working with our oldest and largest supporting member, Peoples Memorial Association, to bring you this program. PMA made history last year by opening the largest nonprofit, member-owned funeral service cooperative in the country. Don't miss this chance to come together in the city where it all started, and meet the people who are bringing funeral consumer advocacy into the 21st century!

FEATURED SPEAKERS AND PLENARY SESSIONS

Mark Harris — Natural Burial: It's Not Just For Hippies Anymore

Join author and former L.A. Times Environmental Reporter Mark Harris for a state of the nation update on natural burial. What's it all about, where's it going, and how can you bring truly traditional, economical, and environmentally friendly funerals to your community? Harris has been featured on National Public Radio's Fresh Air, and he's been a popular speaker at FCA affiliate meetings. His recent book, Grave Matters, is the most readable, practical, and straightforward manual available on clearing the clutter and consumption out of funerals so we can tread lightly on the land — and our wallets — even in death.

Valerie Bayham , Institute for Justice — Caskets, Cartels, and Consumer Choice

Dismantling the funeral industry's monopoly on casket sales in Tennessee and Oklahoma is only the first step in the Institute for Justice's mission of returning economic liberty to the people. From funeral directors to florists, Bayham will explain how regulated groups gain control of their regulatory bodies and begin dictating new regulations that further their bottom line rather than the benefit consumers. Learn what you can and should do about it.

Kathryn Tucker — Compassion and Choices

A graduate of Georgetown University Law School, Tucker is Director of Legal Affairs for Compassion & Choices, a national non-profit public interest organization dedicated to improving end-of-life care and expanding and protecting the rights of the terminally ill. She successfully defended Oregon's Right to Die law before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ruth Bennett — President of People's Memorial Association

The Libertarian candidate for Washington Governor in 2004, Bennett will kick off the conference with the story of how PMA turned lemons into lemonade in a three-month sprint to open the nation's largest non-profit, member-owned funeral services co-op after PMA lost its contract with its long-time funeral home.

Anatomical Donation Panel with representatives from

-The Pacific Northwest Transplant Bank

-Northwest Tissue Services

-Willed Body Program of the University of Washington

-BioGift

Confused about the various forms of donation? What's the difference between a non-profit willed body program and a for-profit tissue bank? Join our expert panel to learn about organ donation, life enhancing tissue donation, university willed body programs, and new organizations that procure whole bodies for scientific research. There are important ethical questions and body and tissue donation — who pays for it, and who gets paid? Bring your questions and concerns for a lively discussion.

Workshops and Breakout Sessions

(choose up to three on the registration form)

Advocacy 101: Waking Up to Your State Legislature

Joshua Slocum, FCA Executive Director

This is Advocacy 101 - The Basics. It's time to stop saying "we're not political" and start watching what your lawmakers are doing in your statehouse. FCA groups that don't pay attention are finding funeral consumer rights are being written out of their state laws by industry trade groups. But it doesn't have to be this way, and jumping in from the consumer advocacy side is fun and invigorating. In this workshop, you'll learn:

- How to find out what your existing state laws require and forbid (you'll know more than government clerks know who lean over the counter and give mistaken advice)
- How to monitor your state's pending legislation in the comfort of your bathrobe
- How to write clear, compelling testimony and letters of support and opposition your members can use to make consumer voices heard

- How to get great publicity for your FCA (and excited new members) in the process

Advocacy 102 —From Reaction to Action

Elvira Hoffman, President of FCA of Long Island/ New York City; NY Legislative Liaison for FCA National

No one has been more successful than Hoffman at standing up for funeral consumer rights in the statehouse. Join her to:

- Learn how to move from just reacting to other people's bills to writing your own.
- Get tips on how to write a bill (yes, you can!) that stands a good chance of becoming law.
- Learn how FCA of L.I. /NYC went from doing a simple survey of local cemeteries to getting a bill introduced that would require General Price Lists at cemeteries.

This step by step approach can help you do the same in your state. If FCA L.I./NYC can do it, so can you!

Marketing Your Mission: New Ways to Put Funeral Planning Front and Center

*Ruth Bennett, PMA President
John Eric Rolfstad, PMA Executive Director*

What are the most effective things you can do to drum up enthusiasm for your mission? How can you get people talking about funeral planning - and actually have fun doing it? Public speaking is one piece of that, but not the only one. Leaving paper pamphlets at the local church won't do the job the way it did 20 years ago. We'll look at new ways to grab attention for your mission including easy, cheap ads on Google, getting your name listed in community human service directories, and marketing your mission to community "gatekeepers" such as hospices, hospital discharge planners, nursing homes and social workers.

Ask a Funeral Director

Panel discussion with the consumer-oriented funeral directors who work with PMA. Steve Barton, Len Burton-Hardin, Gary Klontz and John Moles, will talk about consumer-friendly funeral practices, green burial, and more.

Diversity in Death

Dr. James W. Green, University of Washington, Dept. of Anthropology

Families of diverse cultural backgrounds often have less experience with and greater mistrust of institutions associated with end of life care including hospitals, the funeral industry, and consumer advocacy groups. This workshop will ask why, and suggest ways consumer advocates can address these issues.

Natural Burial, the Ultimate Back-to-the-Land Movement

Cynthia Beal, the Natural Burial Company

The Portland-based Natural Burial Company strives to educate and inform consumers, institutions, municipalities, and the funeral industry about the options and opportunities available to us all when the public is permitted to choose a "green" burial. With a focus on products — the goods and services consumed or created — the NBC works to foster sustainability and ethical practices in the funeral transaction while running a profitable business that serves customers well and provides a living for the staff. Beal will give a fast-paced and informative session that recaps this ultimate 'back to the land movement', and inspires others to develop business niches that work for the customer, the environment, and the employees.

Effective Networking: Energize Your Chapter and Yourself

Julie Lomoe, MA, Administrator of the Memorial Society of the Hudson-Mohawk Region

Successful FCA chapters need positive communications. Our potential network of relationships includes our boards, our members, local funeral directors, human service organizations, government agencies, the national FCA, the media, and most importantly, the general public who could benefit from our services but may not know it yet. This workshop will explore the characteristics of our chapters' networks and how to expand and strengthen them. We'll touch on relevant research in communications theory and end-of-life issues, and employ exercises drawn from sociodrama and the creative arts therapies. Participants will come away with a list of resources and ideas for enlivening their board meetings back home.

A Grave Plot: The Resurrection of the Rhode Island Affiliate

Bruce Donovan & Susan Graefe, the Memorial Society of Rhode Island

The Memorial Society of Rhode Island has arisen out of a near-defunct organization of about 200 members originally established in 1983. In 2007, a new Board began talking about a possible change of name, FCA national, affiliation and the tone and emphasis of the new group. Over the past year the Society has collected General Price Lists for a its first-ever survey of funeral prices across the state, in a process adapted from the national FCA manual. We've designed a new brochure, and we're working to re-launch our newsletter. Board development will also engage us. This process has been interesting and even exciting — join us to learn from our experience and share yours.

Changing With the Times: Revamp,
Rethink and be Relevant!

Wendy Lyons, Funeral Consumer Information Society of Detroit; Sarah Robinson, FCA of Hawaii

Rethink Your Direction — It's time to turn off the cruise control! Funeral consumer issues have changed over the decades, and we need to change with them. Lyons will present some "hot" topics for 21st-century Americans of all ages, including family-directed funerals and how to overcome the legal hurdles that sometimes make them difficult. Lyons will show you how to raise public awareness, get media attention and make an impact in your state.

Making Your Price Survey Relevant —Consumers can often save $1,000 or more on final arrangements by making two telephone calls. Unfortunately, instead of comparison shopping, many consumers make only one call, often to the funeral home with the splashiest yellow page ad. So, comparison-shop for them with a price survey. The crucial next step is making your survey relevant. Robinson will show you how she successfully markets the Hawaii Mortuary Price Survey. You'll leave with at least one idea or Sarah will eat a piece of her survey!

Old Traditions: New Ways – Bringing
Funerals Back to Family and Friends

Sandy Booth and Donna Belk, Crossings Care Circle

Funerals in the past - what was traditional? Caring for the dead in the home. With the move from rural to urban settings the country undertaker/coffin maker evolved into the modern mortician. With industrialization people looked to the professional specialist in many areas of life, from physicians attending mothers in childbirth in the hospital to funeral directors attending the dead in the funeral parlor. There is now a growing trend for families once again to become involved in the process.

You'll learn how to carry out the practical aspects of caring for a loved one who has died. Basic skills will be covered related to how to care for the body to give you the confidence and courage to create a beautiful and meaningful experience when death occurs.

Start Spreading the News

Steve Nicely, FCA of Greater Kansas City Newsletter Editor

This veteran Kansas City Star journalist offers practical tips on rejuvenating your newsletter as a way to energize your affiliate and membership. Topics include assigning stories (finding a few talented writers in your membership and putting them to work); plagiarism (how to adapt interesting copy and photos from other sources without being sued); the internet as a newsletter tool; design basics and dealing with a print house.

They Aren't That Scary: Using Computers
to Run Your Chapter

Paul Deischer, Office Manager, People's Memorial Association

Computers have come a long way in the last 50 years. They aren't as big as a room anymore and you don't have to be a math genius, a computer whiz, or a teenager to use one. We'll talk about the what, the how, and the why of using computers in a non-profit setting. Topics will include: databases (what they are and what they're good for), spreadsheets, email, accounting software, backing up, security, and cheap (sometimes free!) ways to get all the above.
